

Brandon Lloyd

Brandon Lloyd is an alumnus of the University of Illinois and a celebrated former NFL All-Pro wide receiver. Brandon's professional football career demonstrates more than a decade of dedication, during which he astounded fans with his incredible athleticism and effort. Notably, in 2010, he led the NFL with 1,448 receiving yards, a testament to his talent and hard work.

Brandon's success off of the field mirrors his achievements on the field. His steadfast commitment to education led him to return to the University of Illinois, where he completed his undergraduate degree with the class of 2018, and a 2022 graduate of the University of Denver's Daniels School of Business, underscoring the importance of lifelong learning.

A multifaceted individual, Brandon's passion for business and community development has driven him to found a private music publishing entity, engage in aerospace sales, and actively support youth through various initiatives as an active player in the NFL.

Post NFL, he worked as an Ambassador for CareerWise Colorado, which bridges the gap between education and career, a platform connecting high school students with invaluable white-collar apprenticeship opportunities with local businesses, and as the board chair of the Denver Tennis Park, he is at the forefront of creating equitable access to tennis for Denver's youth in an environment that nurtures health, well-being, and community engagement. His work in these capacities embodies the spirit of innovation and service to youth development.

Brandon is a Health and Benefits Consultant at Gallagher, helping mid- and large-size employers in all industries optimize employee benefit programs, manage cost and risk, and enhance their value proposition to attract and retain talent.

Brandon brings this vision and drive to Harvard, inspiring the next generation of leaders with his story of transition, leadership, and societal impact.
