

BIO

Evy Peña is an award-winning advocate and narrative strategist specializing in labor rights, immigration, gender equity, and children's rights. With a focus on racial justice and human rights, Evy has led international programs and campaigns to advance the rights of migrant workers across the Americas through a blend of litigation, technology, grassroots organizing, and media advocacy.

Her career includes spearheading transnational campaigns for labor protections, including efforts around trade and Mexico's labor reform. She mobilized dozens of organizations to champion civil society's role in safeguarding human rights in the lead-up to the 2026 FIFA World Cup. Evy has trained hundreds of advocates, organizers, and worker leaders in leveraging media for labor rights campaigns across borders. Her commentary has been featured in Bloomberg, The Wall Street Journal, The Associated Press, and Reuters.

Evy holds a bachelor's degree from Georgetown University and a master's degree from the Harvard Kennedy School of Government
