

BIOS

Jaylen's Bio:

Jaylen Brown, an NBA All-Star with the Boston Celtics, has emerged as a leading voice in social justice and community empowerment. Off the court, Jaylen is dedicated to leveraging his network, resources, and platform to build meaningful connections for young people, particularly in historically underserved Black and Brown communities. His foundation, The 7uice Foundation, reflects this commitment by partnering with institutions, organizations, and social change leaders to bridge the opportunity gap for youth.

The 7uice Foundation's cornerstone initiative, the "Bridge Program," embodies Jaylen's vision for change. Aimed at connecting young people with resources that are often difficult to access—such as education, extracurricular activities, arts programs, and digital literacy training—the program collaborates with organizations already doing remarkable work to create impactful opportunities for youth of color. Jaylen believes that by building pathways to these existing resources, we can help foster a more equitable, just, and sustainable society.

The 7uice Foundation is focused on generating partnerships that break down barriers, enabling youth of color to access transformative opportunities that can shape their futures. Through the Foundation's efforts, Jaylen is committed to ensuring that resources reach the hands of those who need them most, empowering young people to create lasting change in their lives and communities.

Mechalle's Bio:

Mechalle Brown is a dedicated educator and activist, known for her tireless commitment to empowering young minds and advocating for social justice. A proud mother to Quenton Brown and NBA star Jaylen Brown, Mechalle has shaped her life around the pursuit of education and community involvement. She holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Michigan State University and an MBA from American InterContinental University, underscoring her lifelong dedication to academic excellence and personal growth.

Raising her two sons in Marietta, Georgia, Mechalle navigated the challenges of single parenthood with resilience and grace. She instilled the values of education, integrity, and lifelong learning in both Quenton and Jaylen, teaching them the importance of questioning injustices and striving for excellence. Jaylen frequently credits his mother's influence as the driving force behind his success both on and off the basketball court.

Beyond her own academic achievements, Mechalle is deeply involved in social justice efforts, inspiring her children to use their platforms to promote positive change. Her commitment to these causes has not only guided her family but has also impacted her community.

Mechalle's story is one of perseverance, dedication, and the transformative power of education. She continues to be a role model for her sons and countless others, embodying the strength and impact of living with purpose and passion.

Quenton's Bio:

Quenton Brown is a prominent sports advisor and the founder of BAG, a leading sports and entertainment advisory firm that has gained widespread recognition, including from Forbes. His company focuses on creating a dynamic ecosystem for athletes and entrepreneurs, providing them with opportunities that extend beyond their athletic careers and into the business world. Quenton's approach is unique in that it serves clients at all stages of their careers, from high school athletes to seasoned professionals, empowering them to leverage their talents for greater success in both life and business.

Quenton's background is deeply influenced by education and entertainment, shaped by his family's legacy. Holding business degrees and specializing in sports management, Quenton's academic foundation, combined with his own experiences as a collegiate athlete and professional in the sports industry, have been crucial to his success. Through his community ties, Quenton actively contributes to supporting others, particularly through his family's 7uice Foundation, which seeks to inspire and uplift local communities. He continues to bridge the worlds of sports and business, guiding his teams toward impactful, sustainable careers both on and off their fields.