

Isa Ellis is deputy director at the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation focused on expanding education and employment pathways that lead to economic opportunity and mobility. Prior to joining the Gates Foundation, Isa was national vice president at the Boys & Girls Club of America, launching the organization's first national postsecondary and workforce development strategy. She also served as Head of Global Education and Workforce Development at the Clinton Global Initiative where she facilitated the organization's largest education commitment of more than $600M in investments to improve education access and outcomes for girls, globally. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, Isa serves on the board and advisory councils of Digital Promise, Workforce Matters, UNCF Pacific Northwest, and Inside Track.